There are two related definitions of entropy: the thermodynamic definition and the statistical mechanics definition. Historically, the classical thermodynamics definition developed first. In the classical thermodynamics viewpoint, the system is composed of very large numbers of constituents (atoms, molecules) and the state of the system is described by the average thermodynamic properties of ...

The heat death of the universe is a plausible ultimate fate of the universe in which the universe has evolved to a state of no thermodynamic free energy and therefore can no longer sustain processes that increase entropy. Heat death does not imply any particular absolute temperature; it only requires that temperature differences or other processes may no longer be exploited to perform work.

Water vapor is the component of air which can vary the most from place to place, from day to day, even hour to hour. The amount of water vapor in air will literally change with the weather and other variables such as proximity to large bodies of water, and the temperature of the water in those nearby lakes, seas and oceans.
