Decay heat is the heat released as a result of radioactive decay. This heat is produced as an effect of radiation on materials: the energy of the alpha, beta or gamma radiation is converted into the thermal movement of atoms.. Decay heat occurs naturally from decay of long-lived radioisotopes that are primordially present from the Earth's formation.

Measuring rates of decay Mean lifetime. If the decaying quantity,  $N(t)$ , is the number of discrete elements in a certain set, it is possible to compute the average length of time that an element remains in the set. This is called the mean lifetime (or simply the lifetime), where the exponential time constant,  $\tau$ , relates to the decay rate,  $\lambda$ , in the following way:
