Unfulfilling, meaningless, overpriced, unreliable, unresponsive, complicated, slow, inconvenient, and troublesome were all elements that were representative of a Digital Native's dissatisfying information and communication technology (ICT) experience.

Digital Natives: Elements of user dissatisfaction

Digital Natives are used to receiving information really fast. They like to parallel process and multi-task. They prefer their graphics before their text rather than the opposite. They prefer random access (like hypertext). They function best when networked. They thrive on instant gratification and frequent rewards.

Non-Native educators will need to learn to incorporate the Internet into their teaching because, as Prensky notes, that is the first place the Digital Natives will go for information. But before we discard all of our Digital Immigrant notions of teaching and learning, and before we turn to video games and simulations as the primary modes of instruction, we should answer a number of questions.
